Much as there is in this mystery of Atonement which we cannot fathom, the offer of God there made to us is practically plain. If a man come before God in penitence for his sins and with faith in Jesus, God will forgive him his sins--that is, will not impute them to him or will reckon them as if they did not exist. But does God then make believe ? The sins are real acts of the man; they still, though he repent of them, belong to his character. How can God, Who is the True, reckon them as if they were not? I answer, because God sees us and deals with us not as we are, but as we are becoming. The truest judgment of any person or thing is...
