Excerpt: . . . of Mexican and pueblo towns) to relieve the nakedness of its appearance. We had not more than begun to get sight of the pueblo, when we noticed a body of Indians approaching -us from it. This party purported to be a deputation, headed by the govjiernor (cacique) and alcalle, which had come out for the purpose of escorting the governor of New Mexico (Colonel Waslrington) into town. Their reception of the governor and his suite was very cordial. The. alr. -alde, I noticed, was habited in the undress frock of the officers of the. army, garnished with the white metallic button. After proceeding in company about a mile, we were unexpectedly-saluted, at a preconcerted signal from a chief, with an exhibition of a sham fight, in which men, young and old, and boys entered with great. spirit. Guns were fired, dust was thrown in...
