I intended to have prepared for publication a System of Glossology, but was deterred by the labour of such an undertaking, and the dread a malady most incident to publishers, which those worthy bookmen exhibit at having anything to do with an extensive work, by an unknown author, on a subject hitherto uninvestigated. On reflection, it appeared to me that reading a communication of the heads of my subject before this long-established society would be the better plan, leaving all details for a future day, to be given or withheld according to the reception of the scheme itself. This will account for the brevity of the Paper now submitted to the Public, who are most interested in its disclosures - to whom...
