The present University year will be remembered for several important events. First of all, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of Vanderbilt University, October 21-23, 1900, was the most notable educational celebration ever held in the South. The careful manner in which every detail of this celebration had been planned, and the thorough work of every committee intrusted with its execution, caused the occasion to pass off with brilliant success. The general interest manifested by the press brought the University into conspicuous notice. The large attendance of delegates from other institutions showed clearly the high position Vanderbilt University holds in educational circles. The very especial interest taken in the occasion by the city of Nashville proves how strong a hold the University has at last taken on the community in which it is located. The year 1900--1901 will also...
