Lucys window sounded the first note of his matin song, she awoke from the heavy, unrefreshing slumber into which she had fallen; and, as she sat gloomy and thoughtful, she remembered a verse in the Bible, which read, Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. And then she thought that Jesus was inviting the sorrowstricken and distressed to come to him for assistance. She was very willing to come now; she was ready to acknowledge her utter helplessness; and she thought she could never forgive herself for making so many vain boasts of being out of danger of falling into sin, when she was entirely under its bondage. She desired more than any thing else to escape...
